Statement of Significance and List of Character Defining Features

Description of Property

36 Second Street is located on the north side of Second Street in the Town of Bowmanville. The property contains a one-storey building constructed between 1946 and 1947 as part of Bowmanville's Veteran's Housing Initiative.

Physical/Design Value

36 Second Street has design value as a representative example of purpose-built post-WWII Victory Housing. Typical of this type of building is its one-storey construction, rectangular plan, asymmetrical massing, and side gable roof with modest overhanging eaves. The subject building follows a simple and compact form with frame construction and clad with horizontal siding. 36 Second Street showcases unadorned rectangular window openings of various sizes and a simple, single, rectangular entrance door opening located in an enclosed portico topped with gable peak. The subject building does not feature any ornamentation or decorative features, which is typical of the Victory House style. There is a front gable peak which also appears to be a common design element found in the Victory Housing neighbourhood which is located over paired rectangular windows. The building has an exterior brick chimney, which is a feature found on all the Victory Houses within the planned Victory Housing neighbourhood.

Historical/Associative Value

36 Second Street has historical value for its association with the Veteran's Housing initiative spearheaded by the local municipal government as a result of the Veteran's Land Act. The subject property was originally part of local entrepreneur John Jury's large estate, which was purchased by the Town of Bowmanville in 1946 to be the site of Bowmanville's veteran's housing subdivision. The Town of Bowmanville Council allocated funds to construct the subdivision, likely marking the first time the town acted as a builder. The subject property is one of 18 lots undertaken as part of the Town of Bowmanville's Veteran's Housing initiative. Throughout Ontario and Canada, the planned and deliberate construction associated with these kinds of Veteran's Housing initiatives was the result of legislation like the Veteran's Land Act. The Veteran's Land Act sought to provide affordable housing to returning veterans and personnel associated with domestic war industries in Canada. 36 Second Street was constructed between 1946 and 1947 by the Toronto Construction Company. As intended by the Veteran's Housing initiative, the first occupant of 36 Second Street was George Carter, who purchased the house in 1947. George Carter enlisted in 1940, and served overseas in the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps. He was discharged in 1945.

36 Second Street has historical value for its association with Camp 30, a Prisoner of War Camp for German military officers that was located at the intersection of Concession Street East and Lambs Road. Camp 30 was originally a Boys' Training School, which was also built on part of the Jury estate in the 1920s but expropriated by the federal government in 1941 for the war effort. Camp 30 was declared excess property after the cessation of World War II. At that time, the Town of Bowmanville purchased the buildings and due to a post-war material shortage, materials were taken from Camp 30 and used to construct the 18 Victory Houses. Additionally, the cost of installing municipal services in the neighbourhood was also supported by the sale of salvaged Camp 30 materials not required for the Victory Housing project.

Contextual Value

36 Second Street is important in supporting the character of the planned Victory Housing neighbourhood located along Veterans Avenue, Second Street, and Lambs Lane. As part of the Veteran's Housing initiative begun by the Town of Bowmanville, simple one-storey Victory Houses were constructed on 18 uniform lots in the planned community. All 18 buildings followed a uniform and rhythmic layout and design achieved through setback, massing, and height, which has created a cohesive and uniform streetscape. The subject property exhibits setback, height, and massing consistent with the character of the area. 36 Second Street, and the surrounding 17 houses located in the neighbourhood, support one of the best examples of a Victory Housing neighbourhood in the Municipality of Clarington.
